Nerds Anonymous

January - March

Meet Rocko and Dexter. Rocko is cooler than The Fonz! (At least in his mind.) His protégée, Dexter Poindexter, is not. Dexter's proudest achievements centre around his yo-yo. What happens when this unlikely pair move into their new apartment only to find it already inhabited by a trio of nerdy ladies? Well, your guess is as good as mine, but the words "Comedy", "Romance", and "Are you kidding me? - this is a disaster!" do come to mind. They've all paid rent, they're all broke, so they're all stuck with each other. Can they really co-habitate for two whole months??? It's a question only answered in Applause's screwball comedy, "Nerds Anonymous".

Tuesdays With Morrie

February 17 - March 6
Throughout our lives, each of us will meet a large and diverse group of individuals. Some of these people are forgotten, some become friends and a precious few will leave an indelible mark on your soul. For Mitch, Professor Morrie Schwartz was one of those precious few. As a young college man, Mitch formed a strong bond with his sociology professor; a bond he promised to keep after graduation. But as life happened, Mitch lost contact and all but forgot his dear old professor. Years later, a serendipitous channel-flip finds Mitch starting at Morrie on Nightline. After reuniting with his old college professor, Mitch signs on for the most important class he'll ever take. In doing so, he earns valuable lessons about love, money and the true meaning of life.

Shumiatcher SANDBOX SERIES WhyRobotsMakeBetterLovers

February 25 - March 6

The ethereality of art finds fascinating new levels with this performative installation by visual artist Lee Henderson and contemporary dancers, Johanna Bundon and Barbara Pallomina. The traditional line between audience and performer is blurred to the point of invisibility, with interactive electronics — the predictable and yet ever so unpredictable third party — occupying the dark.

Michèle Provost: Selling Out

January 9 - March 7

Michèle Provost takes on the inundation of consumer culture upon visual art and art history in a tongue-in cheek installation, Selling Out. The artist will transform the gallery into a store-like space filled with over one hundred hand-made action figures based on historical and contemporary artists and their work. These hand-made and hand-painted figures are sealed in industrial packaging, much like the super-hero figures in any toy store. The packaging features printed reproductions of the original works from which each figure is derived.
